

10 Types of Students that Can Benefit from a FLEXIBLE SCHOOL SCHEDULE

For students who face demanding schedules, personal challenges, or rigorous extracurricular activities, a flexible school schedule can make all the difference in helping them succeed.

1 STUDENT ATHLETES

The flexibility offered by virtual learning, as well as the time-management and structure that students are required to develop, helps them learn how to balance being a student athlete in a supportive learning environment.

2 ADVANCED LEARNERS

Virtual learning can offer students accelerated school programs such as honors classes, Advanced Placement, and Dual Enrollment to keep them engaged and academically challenged.

3 CHILD ACTORS/PERFORMERS

Online learning offers many school options for child actors that are not only accredited academic programs, but also flexible enough to accommodate long days on set or on stage.

4 STUDENTS CLOSING THE LEARNING GAP

Whether the pandemic disrupted your child's learning progress, or the at-home learning model has proved helpful for their studies, virtual learning continues to offer an accessible way for students to get caught up with the educational support they need.

5 CAREER PREP STUDENTS

Some students are fortunate enough to gain clarity on their ideal future career path at a young age. Whether they are planning to step into a family business or have their heart set on a new career path, virtual school can be the best fit for supporting students pursuing their goals.

6 COLLEGE PREP STUDENTS

At Connections Academy, we offer students the help of a dedicated College Counselor to guide them and support them through the college admissions process—something that many traditional educational institutions might not have.

7 HEALTH-IMPAIRED

For students who may be dealing with health issues that require a lot of time in hospitals and doctor's offices, a flexible schedule school can grant them the independence to go to school full-time and receive the care they need.

8 TRANSITIONING FROM HOMESCHOOLING

Parents who are considering homeschooling their child may opt for full-time learning at home virtual school instead, which offers a teacher-led and built curriculum that students are able to progress through from the comfort of home.

9 STUDENTS WITH SPECIAL EDUCATION NEEDS

For students with learning disabilities or special needs, a traditional school experience may not be the best fit for their pace and style of learning. This is where virtual learning can be a huge asset.

10 STUDENTS SEEKING A SAFE ENVIRONMENT

If you have a child who has been bullied at school or you are frustrated with how schools handle bullying, virtual learning may offer a promising solution.
